I am a seasoned marketing within the property industry with loads of experience of strategic marketing plans, budgetary management and launches of prestige developments under my belt. I currently work full time for a FTSE 100 landlord/developer and have two teenaged daughter who are needing a bit more support as they big to fly the next to university and sitting A'levels. I thrive in a creative environment and love to be part of a project team. Not afraid to get stuck in, I am known for my loyalty, tenacity and diligence. I am equally at home running a single event - right through to a five year strategic plan. I am currently looking for a better, more flexible way of working, where this is still a great project to get my teeth into, but just more stretch on how I might get it done!

I am a chartered accountant with 7 year work experience with (shhh), London. I was working as an external auditor with (shhh) until August, 2016. I resigned in August, 2016 to look after my children (the younger one being 2 years old at that time). I have two children and now that both are in school, I am looking to get back to work. I am looking for a part time/flexible role (open to explore options outside of audit as well).

I am currently working as an Ecommerce Merchandiser for a Luxury Fashion Brand in London. I am responsible for site performance, sales, and customer experience. Many of my daily duties include launching product, monitoring customer interaction and analysis performance. My educational background and work experience would benefit any new or established ecom business. I have over 10 years experience within retail and have a lot to offer. My ability to blend and adapt to new work environments along with taking on new responsibilities makes me a loyal and well liked individual.

I am a strategic thinker, senior editor, trained Times journalist and content and social media strategist with excellent people management skills and a first-class communicator with 18 years experience working across a plethora of luxury and beverage brands and websites with the ability to influence leadership and drive change. I'm also a proud mum of beautiful 3-year old boy and am fluent in 4 languages. Over the past 18 years I specialised in Content Strategy and Social Media. For me this entails really getting under the skin of content and understanding audience needs. After all, a brand is nothing without its content, so making the most of content is critical to every brands success.

I am a qualified solicitor with a wide range of experience (both in house and private practice) dealing with civil litigation and commercial claims on behalf of commercial and public sector clients. My legal experience also included responsibility for training, preparation of know how updates and drafting precedents as a professional support lawyer together with responsibility for departmental knowledge management and risk management. My last permanent legal role was in April 2007 (followed by an Interim In-house Legal Advisor in 2009) and since that time together with parental and caring commitments during my career break, I have undertaken various voluntary and part time non legal roles. I was part of the commercial team on a joint venture project from 2012-2016 managing a team of document controllers and responsible for the business management system ensuring compliance with the documentation requirements of the project. I am now in a position and am keen to return to a flexible business role and have recently undertaken commercial contracts refresher training and joined networking groups in an effort to return to a legal business/compliance role.
